We had to change roles and do what we normally don't

McKenzie held their lead with the help of Davis' ten points in the fourth quarter. Davis made a shot from the arc, then drove to the basket twice for four points, and had another three points at the free throw line. Chesser had a shot from the 3-point line. Mikaela Reynolds had three points from the foul line, and Kyle Reynolds tacked on one point from the line.

The Lady Rebels defeated the Lady Hornets 67-57 to punch their ticket to the Glass House.

"It's been quite a season," Coach John Wilkins. "[The Lady Hornets] are tough. Every time we would get them down or we would get a little run, they would answer back with a run. The kids were saying 'their good coach' and they are good. Everyone at this stage of the year is good. It is going to take all four quarters for the rest of the year."

The Lady Rebels defense was a huge part of their victory tonight with multiple steals in their full court press and a few blocks in the paint.

"We know what [our full court press] is just how we have to play in order for us to have a chance to win. We have to make it full court all night long. We talked a lot about getting deflections and I thought our girls got their hands on a lot of passes tonight even if we didn't steal it."

Wilkins tipped his hat to Huntland for their effort against his team, and looks to the next opponents even though the bracket hasn't been drawn yet.

"We will be happy to just be there and play with anybody. Ultimately we want to find a way to play on Saturday," Wilkins said. "I'm proud of the girls for hanging with the process and finding a way to win tonight. We have a bunch of winners on this team. When they came and threw some haymakers at us, we had kids just respond and make plays. I'm really proud of them and their effort."

The McKenzie Lady Rebels will head to Middle Tennessee State University on Wednesday, March 8 to start the state tournament. The state tournament games will take place at MTSU's Murphy Center.

On Wednesday, March 8, McKenzie Schools will dismiss at 2 p.m. so students and faculty can attend the opening round as the McKenzie Lady Rebels face-off against Peabody.
