nization from Jenn Penick, director of Hardin Animal Relocation and Transition Team, popularly known as HARTT.

Penick was at the meeting and explained that Best Friends visits shelters that request it, and perform a sort of audit of policies and practices.

"They're going to do a walk through and see what they see, and then they'll address every single thing as they go through. Down to refrigeration of vaccines and everything else - they'll do all those things," she said.

Penick added, "Best Friends is the one that coined the term 'No Kill Shelter,' so they are going to look at it from a 'saving the animals point of view.'"

The Best Friends audit also comes free of charge, Penick said.

After the committee approved having Best Friends come to the Hardin County Animal Shelter, Sikes said he would schedule it with them immediately.

"Worst comes to worst, we'll definitely learn something from it, for sure," Sikes said.

He also told the committee that if the shelter adopts the recommendations from Best Friends and implements them for a certain length of time, the shelter would qualify for a grant from the organization.

The Oct. 24 meeting was at the county courthouse, and the second in two weeks following an unofficial meeting in late June. The last previous meeting of the committee was six years earlier.

County Mayor Kevin Davis called for and chaired the meeting, and he called for civility among those present.

"Let's all be civil tonight. I know we don't always agree with one another, but we can agree to disagree. Respect the other persons and where they're coming from," Davis said.

Perhaps the most notable issue was the discussion that paid employees have either volunteered or been asked to volunteer extra hours beyond those they are paid for.

After a woman who shared that she both works and volunteers at the shelter, Commissioner White commented, "We don't need volunteers working when they're not on payroll. She's part time but she's still working over (those hours) - that's not good."

Sikes responded that paid workers who volunteer extra time do it for the love of the animals.

"Like she said, everybody there is in it for the animals, not for the money. We all work extra time. It could become an issue if we get the wrong personnel," Sikes said to White.

When County Commissioner and committee member David Alexander noted it is against federal law to allow paid employees to work off the clock, Sikes said, "Then for us to survive, we'd have to hire another six employees."

One animal control officer, who did not identify herself, said she's an hourly employee, and that after 40 hours on the clock she's "pretty much on call for free."

Alexander told Sikes that is impermissible. Sikes said that's part of why he tries to limit after-hours calls.

"We try to limit the after hours calls to limit fuel usage, overtime, or comp time, things like that. But it proves hard to do," Sikes said.

When Commissioner Michael Pitts asked the ACO if she accrues a lot of comp time or overtime, the ACO said she doesn't get overtime at all; she gets paid for 40 hours per week for an 80 hour schedule every two weeks.

When the ACO said, "I just work my 80 hours, that's it," an unidentified person in the audience yelled out, "But she works over the 80 hours, she just doesn't get paid for it."

Pitts restated the comment from Alexander, telling Sikes that is impermissible.

Sikes responded, "Typically if she goes over her hours she comes in later the next day, or even takes a day off, if possible," meaning the ACO gets comp time if she works over her scheduled hours.

"Ah - that's wrong," the ACO said.

Regarding another issue, several committee members said they have received complaints that the telephone is never answered at the shelter, nor calls returned when a voice mail is left.

Sikes said he has taken citizen complaints to heart and that he is already working to respond to them.

"A...change...that we've already implemented immediately is answering the phones more. You know we're only open Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from noon until 4 p.m. Typically that's when our receptionist comes in and answers the phones - from this point on, if someone is there the phone is going to be answered," Sikes said, adding the shelter is also open on Saturdays.

He said that would benefit not just citizens but staff at the shelter, because it would space calls out instead of the shelter hearing a lot of calls at one time, and allow staff to respond to them more efficiently.

Alexander said he knows the HCAS staff works beyond a normal workweek, because feeding and caring for animals is a 24-hour per day, seven day per week commitment, as "animals don't live on the clock."

However, he added, members of the public do not always understand that.

"We understand that taking care of the animals and the calls that you all end up going out on are all the time, day or night, but the time our culture expects to be able to call (an office) is somewhat of an 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., or 9 to 5 - that's what the public expects," Alexander said.

He added there will need to be more discussion regarding how many employees and how many labor hours are needed to meet the needs of the shelter.

Alexander also said he had made a recent unannounced visit to the shelter to inspect the conditions there.

"I'll say regarding the condition of the animals I didn't see anything shocking. The animals were clean, they were obviously being fed and they were being given water," he said.

Alexander added, "I did see a 10-year-old building that needs some maintenance and has some issues. I think we need to be addressing those."

He noted issues such as the lack of a commercial washer and dryer to clean the large amount of animal blankets and beds.

Sheriff Johnny Alexander, whose presence was likely due to the tempers that flared at the meeting two weeks prior, offered to donate the county jail's existing commercial washer and dryer to the shelter. He said he has already ordered a new set.

The latest meeting introduced three new committee members; Commissioners Michael Pitts, David Alexander and Emery White.

Blankets of fallen leaves cover the lawns.

It is the perfect time of year for walking. Nothing erases a bad mood like a good, long walk.

Some rainy days have kept many inside lately. The flu has been going around in a big way. Keep up the hand washing and stay healthy.

We had a nice visit with Neil and Vader Oswald in Walkertown. So glad Vader is out of the hospital and healing from knee surgery. They have endured a few years of healing and hurting with Vader's knee. Praying for healing and complete recovery.

I took a short trip to visit my mom in Somerville, Tennessee. My mom's little Bichon Frise dog named Sophie was recovering from pancreatitis. I did not know dogs could have this illness.

I learned the main causes of pancreatitis are cigarettes and alcohol. I am sure Sophie never partook of these. Probably eating fatty foods and junk foods were her enemy. I know my mom is taking good care and make sure Sophie gets a good diet to avoid this happening again.

Making sure our animals are fed healthy diets is the best way to avoid them getting sick.

I have received some great advice from readers of The Courier. Emails and cards with tips for how to recover from the stroke have proven to be valuable. Everything from exercise to meditation have made a difference. I am up to three miles of walking now. Thank you, faithful readers.

My daughter learned a lot about cooking while she lived in Italy. She encouraged me to make French bread. She said it is so easy. I have been working on it. The recipe is simple, and the rising is easy.

French bread recipe

- Ingredients
- 2 cups warm water
- 2-1/2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 package yeast
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 5 cups flour
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- Directions

Pour packet of yeast into 2 cups 110 degrees water plus sugar. Let the water sit 10 minutes until foam forms.

In a medium bowl pour water mixture and add 2 cups flour. Mix until smooth and add remaining flour 1/2 cup at a time. Mix after each addition of flour. When soft dough is formed, fold into a ball and move to another bowl that is greased with olive oil. Cover and let rise for 1-1/2 hours.

Move dough to a floured board and separate into two balls. Knead each ball 10 times and place each on a parchment paper covered cookie sheet. You may want to use 2 cookie sheets. Let rise again for 1-1/2 hours.

Optional - brush with melted butter.

Bake at 400 degrees for 25 minutes or until golden brown. Crispy outside, light, and fluffy inside.
